

Adriana Hoyos Design Studio

CARBONELL RESIDENCE, MIAMI

Adriana Hoyos Design Studio is a Florida-based firm of interior designers and architects with a global footprint that draws on more than 30 years of experience across the residential, hospitality, and commercial sectors. Carbonell, a 2,600-square-foot bachelor pad in which elegance and sensuality meet in studied harmony, is a key project for the firm. The concept takes inspiration from the allure of fine jewelry: gold, Colombian emeralds, sapphires, and other precious stones. "Our philosophy is applied to every room," Adriana Hoyos states. "Attention to detail, timelessness, and personalization are our three main pillars."

Natural and raw materials take center stage. Nero Marquina marble surfaces, with delicate veining and a leathered finish, add a dose of drama to the kitchen and the powder room. Textured wood elements, whether used for furniture or custom cabinetry, bring warmth and coziness to the living and sleeping spaces. Sink-into sofas and armchairs upholstered in chenille and velvet invite the client and visitors to kick up their feet and relax, while leather accents on ottomans and side chairs lend sober refinement. Throughout, Hoyos gave careful consideration to the placement and intensity of chandeliers, sconces, and table lamps for a gentle, flattering glow that enhances the overall atmosphere. The project in a nutshell? Luxury and comfort coexisting, effortlessly.

Clockwise from above: A sculptural settee offers a place to perch in the cove-lit warmth of the primary bedroom in the Carbonell residence in Miami by Adriana Hoyos Design Studio. Edge-lit brass pendant fixtures catch the glow of the sunset over the leathered marble kitchen island. A chandelier resembling rock crystals dangles like a jeweled necklace in front of a kintsugi-style mirror in the powder room. A moody palette meets spectacular art in the living area. Another vantage of this space, with its plush seating. Custom wood cabinetry in a fluted texture brings dimension to the kitchen.
